6.0 "GUIDELINES FOR THE IMPLEMENTATION ...

The Chair welcomed Dr. Rose Sheinin who was unable to attend the last SRC Meeting.

Dr. Sheinin thanked committee members for accommodating her. She has read the document thoroughly and in general she has two reactions to it:

She voiced her support for the document's attempt to provide requisites for a well integrated mechanism in which strategic academic planning and budgeting constituted an effective context for research development. She urged the committee to send these recommendations on to SCAPP, which would soon deal with the issue of strategic academic planning in the University.

Dr. Sheinin voiced reservations regarding whether academic units at Concordia were capable at this time of engaging in the type of planning demanded by the SRC's document.

She also voiced the view that she hoped that the current document would be followed soon by other recommendations bearing upon concrete actions which the University might take in the shorter term to enhance research at Concordia.

The members of the committee engaged Dr. Sheinin in discussion. Various members stressed the need to institute as soon as possible the type of planning and budgeting process recommended in the SRC's document if any serious development in the academic sphere were to take place. It was stressed that Concordia faced a window of opportunity in the several years ahead to shape significantly the academic sector in light of priorities and strategies adopted by Senate for the enhancement of research.

As a result of the discussion, it was decided that Recommendation 1 should be reworded to clearly reflect the intent that academic planning required first and foremost planning at the level of the individual academic unit. It was also decided that the SRC immediately move as a next step to making recommendations concerning mechanisms to enhance research which could be implemented in the shorter term and/or concurrently with the type of planning called for in the document under discussion.

An ad hoc sub-committee, comprising D. Ginter, V.V. Baba and T.S. Sankar, and chaired by J. Lightstone, will further pursue these issues in order to facilitate discussions at the next meeting.
